

The Art Students League Gala Takes Over MoMA's Halls

Earlier this past week, New York City's preeminent arts education organization rallied its friends and key supporters for a night benefiting the League's scholarships and Seeds of the League initiative for the city's underserved students. League instructor and painter Larry Poons and philanthropist Beth Rudin DeWoody were honored during a night of cocktails, dinner, and dancing at MoMA. During cocktail hour, guests were treated to live demonstrations of sketching, painting, collage, and other disciplines by League artists, while a post-dessert dance performance by Cassandra Rosebeetle and Tansy made a lasting impression before attendees dispersed into the night.
