

LETTERS

letters@nypost.com

Stealing From the Poor: NYC's Bribery Bureaucrats

It was supposed to have been about $100 million in 1992 by NYCHA. But it is now $1.2 billion. It is a scandal that is an embarrassment to an agency that serves the city's most vulnerable. NYCHA should be reorganized, a scandal that is an embarrassment to an agency that serves the city's most vulnerable. NYCHA should be reorganized, a scandal that is an embarrassment to an agency that serves the city's most vulnerable. NYCHA should be reorganized, a scandal that is an embarrassment to an agency that serves the city's most vulnerable.

FLY BY NYCHA

It took them 10 years to finish their investigation. Who is investigating? The city and state. Meanwhile, the residents of these buildings endure a terrible neglect. They should have exposed the corruption sooner.

The Mayor's administration, which is now in charge, should have exposed the corruption sooner. The Mayor's administration, which is now in charge, should have exposed the corruption sooner.

While I applaud the recent crackdown on the abuse of real estate contracts at the NYCHA, the estimated $1.2 billion in fraud, which involved a deep in the pocket. The true picture is one of a large-scale corruption in the city's housing department. I'm thinking of the significant expense of the recent Avenue J stop-work construction, which apparently cost $10 million. It is a scandal that is an embarrassment to an agency that serves the city's most vulnerable.

When it comes to corruption in the Big Apple, it's time the big fish, not just the low-hanging fruit. John Duddiney, Brooklyn

The criminal charges filed against some 30 CHA employees are a credit to federal prosecutor Kurt Schwara. They also leave a blank on former Mayor Giuliani's record.

Biden's Weak Iran Response

America needs to borrow a tactical playbook from the Israelis ("Too Little, Too Late," Editorial, Feb. 3). The ultimate sign of fecklessness was the timing of the predictable counter assault after the Dover Air Force Base ceremony. The only thing we forgot to do was announce the specific bombing locations in Iraq and Syria.

As long as the United States skirts around the source of the aggression and fails to directly target Iran, attacks on Americans will continue.

This timid response is emblematic of the Biden administration. Ronald G. Frank, West Orange, N.J.

The recent strikes in Syria and Iraq just highlight the incompetence of President Biden's foreign policy. Giving advance notice of retaliation and refusing to attack Iran directly makes these strikes, no matter what they accomplish, meaningless.

It also raises the question of Biden's back in his re-election campaign. He is in control of the left, or at least it is incompetent. Worst sign yet: Biden's refusal to take a stand against the Iranian regime. That's a fact and always will be. The gender extremists put into the basics of biology is as futile as it is against women. The greatest loss of life is to be ignored. Biden is a fact and always will be. The gender extremists put into the basics of biology is as futile as it is against women.